Indians of California differ from those of any other country, and it will not be easy to give an account of them. Their numbers are immense, but it is difficult to estimate their exact number. The whites have never seen any of that skill and art, which are the marks of their peculiar civilization. The few who have visited the country, and who have seen some of those native Indians, have been struck with the primitive, but excellent condition of their art and their manner of life.

The Indians of California are perhaps the most instinctive and incapable of anything on a systematic form of art. Many of the richest and most populous countries of the earth have never seen any of that skill and art, which are the marks of the original intelligence of the human mind. The whites have been struck with the primitive, but excellent condition of their art and their manner of life.

Further evidence of the industry of the natives of California is the great number of the whites who have seen them. The whites have been struck with the primitive, but excellent condition of their art and their manner of life.
