16. The above letter was (as usual) handwritten in a small, neat handwriting. It consisted of 21 paragraphs, each starting with a capital letter. The text is written in a semi-circle, with the first line starting near the top of the page and the last line near the bottom. The handwriting is legible, with some minor smudges and flourishes. There are no headings or subheadings. The text appears to be a letter of some sort, possibly from a colonial or early American period. The content is difficult to discern due to the handwriting style and the age of the document.
