took him out, and he with four others were held as being guilty. They were confined in a cabin for the night.
It was the intention next day to give them a trial. The rest were dismissed with presents.

In the evening when the five were brought forth to trial they broke and ran. One or plunged into the river and escaped.
The other four were killed. The place where the five men were murdered was afterwards known as Murderer's Bar.

Four days after an Oregon man by the name of Dougherty was found murdered between Hangtown and Gloma. This raised the murders again and some sixty Indians were killed in retaliation.
Some of them were shot in Daly's yard. Daly was an Englishman who had a ranch on the Comanches.
The Indians were followed clear down to his ranch. Perry ~~Mc~~ McCoub had a ranch near Daly's.

From there Col. Ross went prospecting in company with J. R. Hill and Dickson at Yankee Jim's diggings. Yankee Jim was in company with them and he
